MRS. KNEESE ANNOUNCES INTENTION OF SEEKING RE-ELECTION AS CLERK

Candidates Using Last Days for Filing Nomination Papers for Coming Primary Election

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Kneese filed her nomination papers yesterday for re-election as county clerk at the primaries on August 26th. Mrs. Kneese has held the office for the past 12 years, having been appointed in 1919 by the board of supervisors to succeed her late husband, Joseph H. Nash. She has proven herself one of the most popular and efficient officials of San Mateo county, as is evidenced by her re-election to the position each term without opposition and by large complimentary votes.

She has given the people of San Mateo conty a business-like administration and during her terms of office has introduced new ideas and improvements that makes it recognized today as one of the best conducted in the state. Many of these improvements have been adopted by other counties in the state, several of them much larger than San Mateo county.

In recognition of her ability and as added evidence of her popularity, Mrs. Kneese has been honored each year by the County Clerks' Association of California by being elected secretary of that organization.

Mrs. Kneese personally attends all meetings of the board of supervisors and in addition to her duties as clerk of the Superior Court, supervises the work of her office. During her entire administration not one single criticism has been directed at the office; on the other hand Mrs. Kneese has been commended time and again, not only by the people of the county but by attorneys and others from all sections of the state who have had occasion to visit the office.

Mrs. Kneese has built up an office force, which for courtesy, efficiency and business-like administration is without a compeer in the state. The proximity of this county to San Francisco and other larger cities results in attorneys from all parts of California appearing in the county court, and all are in accord in the praise of the manner in which their cases are handled by the office of County Clerk Kneese.

In making her announcement yesterday, Mrs. Kneese stated:

"It has been my pleasure and my privilege to hold the office of County Clerk of San Mateo county for the past twelve years.

"It has indeed been my good fortune throughout these years to work under the direction of Judge Buck, who has been a lifelong friend, and with the members of the San Mateo County Bar and the many San Francisco attorneys who practice in our county. They have once again sponsored my candidacy and I am happy to have this expression of their confidence in me.

"In again asking the support of the people of San Mateo county I pledge the same efficiency that I believe has characterized my administration of the office of County Clerk in the past..."

KIWANIANS HEAR ADDRESS ABOUT ECLIPSE OF SUN

The recent eclipse of the sun was the topic of an interesting address given before members of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club Wednesday by Prof. D. H. Menzel of the University of California, who is stationed at the Lick Observatory on Mt. Hamilton. Prof. Menzel told the club men how the eclipse had been predicted and explained why the path of totality was so narrow. He also told of some of the practical results which have been derived from the study of astronomy.

The chairman of the meeting was Howard I. Wood, secretary-manager of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce. Prof. Menzel was accompanied by Mrs. Menzel.

This evening a party of Kiwanians will visit the Boy Scout camp at San Mateo County Memorial Park.

The American Legion Post will give a dance tomorrow evening in War Memorial building on Standish street. Charles Ward is in charge of the arangements. Music will be furnished by O'Connor's orchestra.

This is a decided promotion for Dr. Winning, and while friends are expressing their regrets at losing Dr. and Mrs. Winning from the community, he is being congratulated upon receiving a better charge.

Dr. Winning will be succeeded here by the Rev. J. R. Rudkin, who has been in charge of the Methodist parish at Penole.

Rev. Carl M. Warner was re-appointed to the church at Burlingame; Rev. Adam Bird was re-appointed at South San Francisco. New appointments were announced for all other churches of the county. At Halfmoon Bay, Rev. A. F. W. Walters was appointed; at San Bruno and Milbrae, Rev. H. D. Harkins.

Jenkins to Run For Treasurer

Burlingame Man Will Try To Defeat Mrs. Cooper, Incumbent

Announcement was made this week by Henry Jenkins, city councilman of Burlingame, that he would seek election as county treasurer. Jenkins, who in addition to being city councilman, is also president of the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce, will oppose the present county treasurer, Mrs. Grace L. Cooper.

Jenkins has been on the Burlingame city council for the past two years, and has been a resident of that city since 1915.

His opponent, Mrs. Cooper has been county treasurer during the present term, having been elected out of a field of five following the retirement of the late P. P. Chamberlain. She had, prior to her election, served as deputy under Treasurer Chamberlain for three years, and has during her term of office shown herself to be a capable and efficient official.

Merchant Seeks Election as Clerk

E. B. Hinman of Redwood City announced yesterday his candidacy of the office of county clerk. He will oppose Mrs. Elizabeth M. Kneese, who has filled the office for the past twelve years.

Hinman has been a resident of Redwod City for a nmuber of years and has been engaged in the grocery business. He was for some president and manager of the local chamber of commerce, and is now a member of the city council, having been recently appointed to fill out the term of Z. T. Thorning, resigned.

Hinman's announcement as issued yesterday was as follows:

"I announce myself as a candidate for the office of county clerk of San Mateo County.

"It is the privelege of every American citizen to seek without apology or excuse, any public office for which he is fitted by ability and experience. Still, I would not be a candidate if I did not feel that the voters of San Mateo County are entitled to the privelege of expressing, at this time, their choice in certain matters of policy which affect the public interest.

"I will bring to the service of the people of San Mateo county an experience of many years in business and public activities, both civil and military, and the benefit of a fairly liberal education together with some special training which is important in the conduct of the office to which I aspire.

"My aspirations to this office do not include control of the business or patronage of any other office or department in the government of San Mateo county."

PALL BEARER OMITTED

In the list of pall bearers at the funeral of the late Dr. J. L. Ross, through an oversight, the name of Herman W. Schaberg, a life-long friend of Dr. Ross, was omitted in the Tuesday issue of the Redwood City Standard.

Veteran Ends Life In Jump from Pole

Base Hospital Patient At San Carlos on Visit Commits Suicide

Jumping to the ground 30 feet below, while his sister and brother-in-law sought in vain for him to climb down, Leonard Allen Jones, war veteran and patient at the base hospital at Menlo Park, ended his life Tuesday night by jumping from an electric pole.

Jones was given an afternoon off by the hospital attendants in order to visit his sister, Mrs. Frank Moran in San Carlos. After visiting for awhile at the Moran home he went into the back yard and climbed an electric pole. Perched upon the cross-arms of the pole he refused to heed the entreaties of his relatives. Moran then went to summon police and firemen to bring Jones down. But the latter sprung from the pole, and crashed to the earth below.

Dr. J. G. Null was summoned, but upon his arrival he found that the veteran was already dead as the result of his fall.

The body was brought here to the undertaking parlors of Layng & Tinney, where an inquest will be held by Dr. J. C. McGovern, county coroner.

Jones is said to have served with the United States naval forces during the war. He is survived by his wife, and by a five-year-old daughter.

Crash Kills S. F. Police Captain

Captain Wall Dies After Car Turns Over On Return From Felton

An automobile accident on the Skyline road near the Sky Londa tract resulted Wednesday night in the death of Police Captain Eugene Wall of the San Francisco police department. Four other persons riding with Captain Wall were injured in the crash. They were:

Edward J. Murphy, 1215 Dolores street, policeman of the Richmond station crushed back, cuts and bruises.

Cornelius Lehane, 1019 Guerrero, street grocer; broken collar bone, cuts and bruises.

Charles ("Butch") Geggus, 219 Allison street, toy manufacturer; wrenched back and severe head lacerations.

Antone Baroni, 5656 Mission street, solft drink dealer; cuts and bruises.

Murphy, a son-in-law of Captain Wall, was at the wheel when the car, owned by the Captain, took its fatal plunge.

The accident occured when the machine struck a patch of loose gravel on a curve of the road and failed to make the turn.

Baroni was first to free himself from under the wreckage. Staggering to the highway, he enlisted the aid of E. D. Hughes, 168 Baltimore way, San Francisco, and together they extricated the others from under the limousine. Hughes drove Wall, Geggus and Lehane to the Comunity Hospital at Beresford and then took the Captain's body to the Layng & Tinney undertaking parlors in this city. Ray Robertson and G. P. Bradshaw, care takers on the Sky Londa tract, took Baroni and Murphy to the Community hospital.

Wall, who until recently had been a patient in Mary's Help Hospital on sick leave from the Police Department, had been taken out by his son-in-law and his friends for a drive in the fresh air. The party left San Francisco at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, motored to Felton for lunch and was returning home. Murphy attributed loss of control of the car to contacting loose gravel on a highway turn where repair work was in progress.

Captain Wall had been a member of the San Francisco Police Department since October, 1891. Eleven years later, in August, he was made a corporal and was advanced to sergeant in December, 1903. He was promoted to the rank of lieutenant in October, 1904, and in July, 1909, he was made captain and succeeded the late Michael Joseph Conboy in charge of the harbor station when Conboy lost his shoulder straps for the shooting of Bernard Logan, Jr.

Suit Filed Here Following Crash

As the result of an automobile crash near the summit of the La Honda grade on March 23, a suit was filed in the superior court here this week by Clara Ming for $20,300 against David Nemetsky.

The plaintiff, who states that she was a passenger in the car driven by Charles Lightall, alleges that the car in which she was riding was struck and overturned by a car driven by the defendant.

Meeting Held To Boost Local Labor Employment

Secretary Wood Is Speaker At Meeting Held At San Mateo

An important meeting was held at San Mateo last night and attended by officials, civic leaders and workers from all over the county. The meeting was called at the instigation of the San Mateo County Building Trades Council and was held with the idea of promoting the employment of local labor on local work.

One of the speakers at the meeting was Howard I. Wood, secretary-manager of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce. Secretary Wood reviewed the action which has been taken by the Redwood City government to aid the employment of local men. This body recently adopted a policy of requesting that all contracters accepting street improvement work from the city use cement manufactured by the Pacific Portland Cement Company at their plant here.

The increased use of cement from the local plant helps the company to continue using a large force of Redwood City workmen. This policy could be extended, Wood stated, to include the use of local labor on all public contracts.

In a letter announcing this meeting the San Mateo Building Trades Council stated:

"Merchants and business men of San Mateo county have a special interest in this movement, for in the long run it is they who feel the ill effects when workingmen are unable to pay their bills. We invite you, therefore ,in your own interest and that of the public good, to be present at the meeting and also ask that you tell your friends and neighbors about it.

"We all know that outside contractors do a great deal of work in San Mateo county, some of it for the public, and that they bring outside help to work on these contracts while local artisans are idle. In other words the man who has his home and family here, who helps support the schools and whose trade does to the local merchant is unable to find work while thousands of dollars, some of it public money, are diverted into homes of workmen in San Francisco and Alameda counties."

Stage Set for Concerts

In preparation for the fifth season of open air concerts which will be given in the charming and delightful Woodland Theatre down the Peninsula under the auspices of The Philharmonic Society of San Mateo County, work was started on the theatre immediately following the close of the Hillsborough District School on the grounds of which the theatre is located.

Since little else other than the picturesque, gnarled old trees which were retained within the area of the theatre when it was planned and the concert stage erected for the orchestra, is of a permanent nature considerable work must be done each season in advance of the concerts to recreate the setting which makes such an ideal place for these summer music programs.

Early in the year, many shrubs and hardy plants are planted flanking the stage and bordering the theatre so that by midsummer they are a definite part of the decorative scheme worked out by the members of the Hillsborough Garden Club, who spend no little time and effort in preparing the surroundings of the theatre so that the natural beauty of the location may be enhanced and perfected without giving any impression of artificiality. Various vines and flowers are selected with an idea of their fitness to the surroundings and the entire setting is planned as a picturesque background for the programs presented.

Awnings are being erected to supplant the shade of the trees, and every effort is being made by the theatre committee under the direction of Mrs. W. Parmer Fuller, Jr., to insure the maximum comfort of the audience

The first concert of the year will take place on Sunday afternoon, June 29th, with Bernardino Molinari of Rome wielding the baton for the eighty-five members of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra who have been engaged for the season. This will be Molinari's third consecutive season as guest conductor for the Woodland series and also the San Francisco Summer Symphony concerts and the Hollywood Bowl programs, attesting to the popularity which the Roman maestro has won during previous visits to California.

SOUTH CITY PLANT INVOLVED IN SUIT

A suit for $247,000 has been filed in San Francisco courts against Mrs. Lenora Marchetti, widow of Paul Marchetti, head of the Marchetti Motors Company, with a plant at South San Francisco.

Marchetti, who was killed in a crash at Mills Field on October 31, is alleged to have made agreements with the Nordick Engine Company and Lester Lampkin, an official of the company, to purchase $80,000 of the company's stock and to acquire patents held by the company for $187,000. The plaintiffs seek to have a carrying out of this agreement by the widow ordered by the court.

TWO MORE DAYS LEFT TO FILE FOR OFFICE

County Clerk Files Nomination Papers; Has Enviable Record in Office For Courteous Service

As the time for filing nomination papers for the August primaries nears a close tomorrow the number of candidates filing for office has taken a decided up turn. In fact almost all who intend to run for office have already filed their papers with County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese.

Wednesday marked the beginning of the scramble to get in under the wire. On that day eight candidates filed their nomination papers. Yesterday four nominations were filed.

Those filing on Wednesday were District Attorney Franklin Swart, who seeks re-election; Coroner J. C. McGovern for re-election; Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, seeking re-election as county superintendent of schools; Thmos Furman of Menlo Park, who is a candidate for sheriff; James S. James of Burlingame who seeks election as county engineer; Col. W. Scott Smith, candidate for congress; and James E. Inglis, candidate for constable in the Second township.

Yesterday Oscar Weisgerber, formerly city manager of San Mateo, filed his nomination for the post in the assembly, now held by Harry Parkman. Mrs. Rosalie Brown, who is completing her third term as supervisor of the Second township, filed for re-election. Dan Flynn and George Kneese, incumbents in the offices of county assessor and county engineer(respectively, also filed their papers for re-election.

Inspector to Check On all Contractors

State Man Will Aid Builders To Secure Blanks For New Licenses

On a tour of inspection through this district, to which he has been regularly assigned, James A. Gray, inspector for the State Department of Professional and Vocational Standards, Section of Contractors' Registrations, arived here yesterday and will make his headquarters at Sequoia hotel during his stay.

Although here primarily to check up on possible existing violations of the contractors' registration law, Inspector Gray will offer his assistance to licensed contractors in securing the 1930-1931 renewal of their state licenses, he announced.

In spite of the fact that licenses under which they are now operating do not expire until June 30, licensed contractors are being urged by the Registrar of Contractors not to wait unitl the final day before filing application for the new license. In order to facilitate the work of renewing all contractors' licenses, specially prepared aplication blanks have been furnished all who were licensed during the 1929-1930 period. The latter are being urged Inspector Gray said, to fill these out and mail them, together with the annual fee of $5 required by law, to the State Registrar of Contractors, Sacramento, Calif., without delay. Prompt compliance with this request will assure all licentiates the receipt of their new licenses before the expiration date of the present one, the inspector said. Renewal blanks which have been lost or mislaid will be replaced by the inspector or by the department on request.

Since there were more than 20,000 contractors and subcontractors under license by the State on May 1, and original applications were still being received at the rate of 35 a day, it is aparent that the task of issuing renewals within the period established by law is not a simple one, the state official pointed out. Co-operation on the part of the licentiates themselves is essential to the prompt completion of the work, he said .

Gray announced yesterday that he had been notified by telegram that no original applications prior to July 1st will be accepted for 1931. Contractors doing business without a license prior to July 1, 1930 are subject to prosecution without defense in violation of the law. Unlicensed contractors must be licensed for 1929-30 prior to July 1.

Two of the blackest little cubs ever seen in Yosemite Valley reached here this week with their mamma to entertain visitors. They are reported to be offsprings of the famous Jesse James, the park's notorious hold-up bear. Mrs. James surprised local residents last spring when she returned from hibernation with three bouncing cublets and now with two more.

Coyotes are killing five deer to every one shot by hunters, according to Walter Lovelace, veteran trapper and mountaineer, who came out of the Sierras recently after six months on his 300-mile trapping line. Coyotes have greatly increased in recent years. A poison campaign is being urged by sportsmen, but unless the National Park service joins in such a program, little can be accomplished as the coyotes are numerous within the park.

Indians married by tribal custom are legally man and wife, Attorney General U. S. Webb ruled at Sacramento in an opinion to Stephen Connell, deputy attorney of San Diego County, according to Pacific Coast News Service. Connell presented the case of an Indian couple married without a license by a Catholic priest on an Indian reservation in 1918. The couple later separated and remarried by taking out a license, but without securing a divorce. The San Diego officials asked if the first marriage was valid. "If the Indians, at the time of their first marriage, were living in their tribal relations and the ceremony was performed in conformity with tribal customs, I am of the opinion that such marriage was valid," Webb declared.

Under the leadership of J. J. Jackson, Nevada City business man, a vigilant committee has been formed to enforce the new ordinance requiring the male population of mature years to refrain from the use of the razor until July 4. The whisker growing will end at the "Days of Forty-Nine" celebration to be given with the annual observance of the Fourth of July. A system of fines has been instituted and Jackson's deputies are instructed to hale all violators regardless of their identity into court for trial. Habitual violators and conscientious objectors will be treated to the experience of a few hours' rest in the local bastile. At this time the faces of most of the male inhabitants are becoming hazy in outline as their long suppressed beards are beginning to sprout. In spite of the protests being made by the local barbers it is expected that in a few weeks the males of Nevada City will be seen just "peeking out."

Billings and Mooney are serving life terms in prison for the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco. A few days ago the Supreme Court announced study of Billing's case was nearing completion

A program under the direction of Miss Mary Harrison and Mrs. Julia Hopkins, teachers, included a talk by Miss Sarah Burnett, grand-daughter of the late governor. The tree was donated by John McLaren, park superintendent.

Records of the first official census believed to have been taken in California have been discovered by the Maryknoll fathers in the ancient Mission San Juan Bautista, it was learned recently. Father Francis Caffrey, superior of the mission, searching among the archives of the old church, found on parchment a census of the padres for the San Juan district taken 128 years ago. It recorded 53 males and 428 females.

Hopes of collecting approximately $6,000,000 from the Federal Government in old debts, some of them owing to the State for nearly seventy years, was expressed by State Finance Director Lyman M. King and State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson after recent conferences. The debt involves services rendered to the National Government by the State during the Civil War and Indian wars, King said.

Amazing population gains were shown by five California counties in census totals made public in Washington, D. C. The largest increase went to San Mateo County, whose population, according to Universal Service, more than doubled between 1920 and 1930. The figures were 36,781 and 77,135. San Bernardino County showed the second largest gain, with a population of 133,878 for 1930 as against 73,401 ten years ago. Monterey County's population jumped from 27,980 to 53,668 and Santa Cruz County's from 26,269 to 37,405. San Benito County had an increase of from 8,995 to 11,310.

Early aid to unemployment on the Pacific Coast was promised in advices from Representative Albert E. Carter, now in Washington, who is arranging a series of meetings with members of the United States Shipping Board. Behind the maneuvers is an attempt to apply the principles of the Jones-White Merchant Marine bill to shipbuilding on the West Coast and San Francisco Bay in particular. The bill, passed a year ago, authorizes government loans to shipbuilders for the purpose of building a powerful merchant marine. Commenting on his plans Carter states: "We hope to find a way whereby some of these loans may be made for construction of ships on the Pacific Coast, and especially in the San Francisco Bay region, where there are five large shipyards waiting for business. This would not only stimulate our trade with the Orient but would be a real factor in overcoming unemployment."

High school students intending to apply for admission into the University of California in August, 1931, and thereafter, may find it easier to get into the learned halls, it has been announced. According to the new plan ten of the fifteen units of academic subjects taken during the prep course must have netted the student a grade of "A" or "B," which are styled "recommended grades." Many high school students have been compelled in the past to take post graduate work to procure a sufficient number of "recs." Other changes in admission requirements provide that physiology will now be acceptable as a high school science subject, and that high school principals will no longer be burdened with the responsibility of recommending or refusing to recommend individual students. Instead, students will now be accepted upon the basis of their recommended grades and their entire high school record.

Whiskey is not an antidote for rattlesnake bite. As a matter of fact, alcohol does more harm than good, as it serves to distribute the poison much more rapidly through the body. Dr. Walter M. Dickie, State director of public health, so declared in a recent bulletin, of "Don'ts for Vacationists" or sportsmen who may be bitten by a rattler in the mountains of California. Other snake-bite don'ts by Dr. Dickie are: Don't run or get overheated. Don't injure the tissue by injections of potassium permanganate which now is known to be of no value as an antidote. Don't depend on snake-bite cures or home remedies commonly used. They are of no value. Don't cauterize the site of the bite with strong acids or the like. Mr. Dickie says the best antidote is to apply a tourniquet a few inches above the bite, binding it just tight enough to retard circulation and absorption of the venom. The tourniquet should be released every ten or fifteen minutes for a minute to permit circulation and prevent gangrene; sucking the wound is also helpful.

FARM POULTRY

FATTEN BROILERS BY USE OF PENS

Confine Fowls Two Weeks Before Marketing.

Many New Jersey poultrymen find that cockerels to be marketed as broilers can be pen fattened to advantage. Two weeks before they are marketed the broilers are confined to pens and fed a special fattening ration. The following ration has given good results in the state: One hundred pounds of corn meal; 50 pounds of wheat middlings, 50 pounds of ground heavy oats or ground oatmeal; 30 pounds of meat scrap.

This mash is mixed with water and fed to the broilers three times a day, all they will clean up in 15 to 20 minutes. When milk is available for mixing, the meat scrap should be omitted from the mash, advises the poultry department of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station. If semisolid buttermilk is used, dilute one part of it with three parts of water and then mix with mash. When powdered milk is used, substitute 30 pounds of it and omit the meat scrap. Water should be kept available for the birds.

It is not advisable to market the broilers until they weigh two to two and a half pounds, says the poultry department.

Early Maturing Pullets Usually Best Layers

In every flock of growing chickens there are always some that grow faster than the others. Observations and experiments have shown that it is these early developing pullets that are the best ones to select for the laying flock. They will start laying sooner than the others and will keep it up longer, provided they are fed a good laying ration and are fed in such a way as to maintain body weight.

Occasionally some will develop sexually, that is, their combs will redden up and become large, and these birds will lay eggs. They may make this development at the expense of their body growth. Such birds should be given a little longer time to put on more growth and weight before expecting them to continue laying. This is done by cutting down the protein in the growing ration, cutting down the meat scrap to about 5 to 10 per cent, and feeding heavily of grain. Follow this procedure for about two weeks.

Preventing Instead of Curing Poultry Ills

A "cured" fowl is a menace to the poultry owner because, as a rule, the bird goes back into the laying flock and loses its identity. It continues to produce eggs or is mated to hens that are laying eggs to be hatched. The chicks from these eggs will inherit the constitutional weakness that made the ancester or ancestors susceptible to the disease.

For this reason, if no other, prevention is far better than cure. Birds which do not have the opportunity to become sick will produce greater returns than those that are kept under insanitary conditions and under improper methods of feeding and management.

Poultry Notes

Nests should be easy to remove to facilitate cleaning.

* * *

Provide clean feed, clean quarters, clean ground, and start with clean chicks.

* * *

Geese are naturally grazing fowls. They have been grown for many generations on pasture.

* * *

Washed eggs have proved unsafe for storage. Therefore nests, houses, and the place in front of the door should be kept clean and as dry as possible.

* * *

If the pullets are laying heavy and getting a little thin in flesh, they may need a little more grain.

* * *

Hatch heavy and medium breeds between February 20 and March 20; light breeds, March 20 to April 20. Do not hatch chicks after May 1.

* * *

Speltz is not much used in poultry feeding. The reason for this is that it is hard to thresh clean and it has sharp points and the hull is very tough and difficult for the hens to digest.

* * *

More than half the ability of a hen to lay a large number of eggs depends upon the breeding of her immediate male ancestors.

* * *

No matter how carefully the culls have been rejected, the good pullets will not lay profitably in poorly constructed houses.

* * *

During the past ten years poultry has been of increasing importance as a source of meat. The relative price of chickens has increased more than the price of eggs during this period.

* * *

In every flock of turkeys with more than one male, it will be found that there is a leader, and this leader in a small flock does practically all of the mating. It is better to alternate toms if more than one is kept for the flock of five to ten hens.

* * *

It has been estimated that 90 per cent of all poultry diseases are caused by insanitary surroundings. Farmers who want healthy and profitable birds put them on new clean ground away from the contaminated soil of the barnyard.

STELLA NEEDED A VACATION AND REST

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

STELLA LEE smiled with anticipation as she descended from the pullman at Craig station. The air was fresh from a recent shower and the countryside seemed friendly and inviting. A neat, shining car slid to a stop by the train platform and a tall, sun-burned man jumped out and approached her.

"Cousin Stella! I'm so glad to see you!"

"Cousin James! This is a pleasure! Where is Rose?"

"Frying a chicken for your supper," James answered. "These yours?"

It was a seven mile drive to Clear Spring farm. Stella was glad that she had come. She was fond of Rose and Jim. Her middle-aged childless cousins. It had been a hard year at the office and Stella was sick of hurry and noise and jazz. She would sleep late every morning, take long walks through the woods and pastures and rock on the front porch.

That evening was all Stella had anticipated and more. First came a delicious supper of fried chicken and gravy, hot rolls and honey and iced milk. Stella talked little, but her cousins hung on every word, eager to learn more about the new sound pictures, which they had never seen, and to glimpse big business through the eyes of an efficient secretary.

Later Stella went with Rose and Jim after the cows and when they returned the purple and gold of sunset was fading into soft, quiet pastel shades. She watched Jim turn the separator, helped Rose feed the portly white cat and then sat in a comfortable old chair and watched the moon climb the sky. Quiet and peace; no noisy neighbors or shrilling radios or clanging traffic.

Next morning Stella was awakened at six o'clock by a strident voice: "One-two, bend left; three-four, bend right."

A radio? Horrors! But Rose referred to the innovation with frank pride. "Jimmie just got new batteries. Now we can have music and programs all day long. He likes the stock reports and the jazz, but I enjoy the cooking chats most of all."

"Things might be worse," Stella was thinking optimistically, and before noon they were. She heard an excited telephone conversation and gathered that Silas Smith, the nearest neighbor, was ill, and his wife terribly worried. Leaving Stella to prepare herself a cold snack, Rose and Jim hurried over to the Smiths. They returned late in the afternoon and when the car stopped it seemed as if a dozen children tumbled out.

"Silas has acute appendicitis," Rose said breathlessly. "Doctor Carr took him to the city for an operation. Bessie went along, of course, and we are going to feed the stock and look after the children."

"You are certainly good neighbors," declared Stella. "Come here, little girl, and tell me your name."

"Jiggs," answered the six-year-old towhead, "and I want to go with my daddy."

She began howling lustily and it required the combined efforts of Rose, Stella, and the ten-year-old twins, Dick and Bob, to comfort her.

"Turn on the radio," Jim suggested. "That will drown her out."

From that hour bedlam reigned. The boys raced shouting through the house and Jiggs and Tramp, a nondescript dog chased the terrified chickens from the front yard to back. Stella peeled a mountain-high pile of potatoes to the accompaniment of an amateur jazz orchestra some fifty miles away.

"How long will you keep the children?" she inquired of Rose, who was baking pies.

"Until Bessie and Silas get home, probably ten days or so. You'll get used to their noise before long."

That evening Stella and Rose washed dishes, while Jim went after the cows. The portly cat did not come for her evening milk; she had disappeared. Later the twins rocked vigorously in Stella's comfortable rocker, while the cold, chaste moon climbed the sky and looked down disapprovingly on the noisy group. Jiggs sat in the squeaky porch swing beside Stella and Tramp was close by scratching fleas.

Stella rose wearily. "I have a headache," she said; "I believe I'll retire."

"Let me sleep with her, Mrs. Bibbs?" coaxed Jiggs loudly.

"Well, you do have to sleep somewhere, that's a fact," smiled Rose. "How about it Stella?"

"Whatever you say," Stella answered weakly.

Jiggs slept soundly, her limbs outflung in childish abandon, but Stella lay wide-eyed. She could never endure this for two weeks, but how could she get away without offending Rose and Jim? She awakened still undecided, but desperate. Fortunately, the arrival of the mail offered a solution of the problem. She had a letter from the office, merely a friendly note from the filing clerk but she seized on it as a means of escape.

"I must go back," she told Rose, holding out the envelope with the firm name engraved in the corner. "An emergency has arisen and I must take the next train!"

"Oh, what a pity!" cried Rose. "We were going to have such fun."

Late that same evening Stella entered her apartment. She flung wide the windows and a cool breeze came in, bearing a faint, pleasing hum of traffic. Taking up the phone, she called a nearby restaurant, ordered her dinner and while she waited for it sorted her three days' accumulation of mail. Her favorite magazine had come, she noted, and the book of the month. Turning the dials of the radio expertly, she allowed a silvery thread of music, poignant and beautiful, to enter the room. This was quiet and peace. The bridge-playing couple who lived in the apartment across from her, she recalled, had gone to the mountains on their vacation. The radio fans who lived below her had gone to the seashore. Stella tasted her shrimp cocktail and as she savored its cool, delicious flavor she let her eyes linger with pleasant anticipation on the waiting book and the soft, inviting couch. She, too, had embarked on her vacation; a vacation—with rest.

Africa's Sausage Tree One of Oddest Known

A tree which bears fruit apparently only to deceive is the so-called "sausage tree" of East Africa, a queer tree if a queer one is to be found.

As the sausage tree is approached while bearing fruit often reaches a length of two feet, with a most inviting look but a most disappointing result upon inspection.

The exterior seems to be edible upon a glance, but the interior is hard and weedy pulp, neither tempting to the palate nor edible.

The tree, which is a member of the catalpa family, has a use, however, and enters into both the religious and medical life of the natives of the country where it is found. The negro tribes of Nubia consider the tree sacred and hold religious festivals in the moonlight beneath its branches. Poles made from the trees are erected before the houses of the chiefs and are worshiped by other members of the tribe.

The natives cut and roast the sausages and place the cut sides against parts of their bodies afflicted with rheumatism and similar complaints.—Washington Star.

In Barren Soil

Huge trees growing without any visible means of support are one of the queer sights of the Zapata swamp of southern Cuba, which is nearly 1,800 square miles in extent. Many varieties of trees, some 4 feet in diameter, are found growing in limestone areas where not so much as a single spoonful of soil can be gathered from an acre. The trees make a start in small pockets and holes in the limestone, where collections of leaves and disintegrated rock furnish them with cover for growth. In their search for food the roots stray about over the surface of the rock, finally plunging through holes to find sustenance in soil hidden deeply in the cavernous recesses of the coral stone.

New Jersey Oyster Race

In New Jersey the sowing of oysters has become an annual event in the form of a race. The seed beds offshore are under the protection of the New Jersey board of shell fisheries. It is against the law for fishermen to gather oysterlets to renew their leased beds close in until May 1. So on that day the oystermen line their sailing vessels up at Bivalve, N. J., and when the coast guards signal by firing a gun the oyster crafts are off to the seed beds.

Faithful Dog

Doctor Dunlap of Kingfield, Maine, made a call and left his rubbers on the porch. His dog, Peter, a cocker spaniel, was with him and took it upon himself to watch those rubbers, which he did until the latter part of the afternoon, going without his dinner to do so, until the doctor's family was notified and came and took Peter and the rubbers home. He had not noted the doctor's departure from another door.

Average Person Getting Too Little From Life

Many people are not asking enough from life, for there is more to be had if one will go at it scientifically, declares Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, famous preacher, in an article in the American Magazine.

Doctor Cadman has formulated ten questions and if the reader must admit any of the accusations, he "needs an earthquake to awake him," he says. The list is as follows:

1. Have you enough knowledge of yourself to understand what you can accomplish?
2. Are you standing still, or are you progressing?
3. Do you ever use your imagination to picture yourself in advance of where you are?
4. Do you focus your aims?
5. Do you see the relation between self-denial and self-expansion?
6. Do you wait for others to pull you along?
7. Do you strive constantly to raise the standard of your tastes and qualifications?
8. Do you mark time instead of marching?
9. Do you ask too little of religion, of morals, of marriage, or of any other factors or facts of life?

"Jot down on a sheet of paper three squares," Doctor Cadman recommends further. "Let the first stand for emotions, the second for brain force, the third for will power. Then trace your actions, mental and moral. Which of these squares will contain the largest number of motivations for these actions? There is but one answer, that representing emotions. Far too many of these are random outbreaks of feeling, unrestricted impulses, hunches that do not hunch."

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS

Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

I have often been asked, who is the greatest baseball player I have ever seen in action? I could name perhaps a score of players who might be rated super-athletes, each one having some outstanding feature that made him great. However, taking all phases of the game into consideration, Ty Cobb is unquestionably the greatest player of all time, as far as I am concerned. I think it was Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, who some years ago named Cobb as the greatest player of all time. Mr. Comiskey, an outstanding star in his days, is perhaps better qualified than anyone I know of to express an opinion on Cobb covering past and present-day stars. I heartily concur in his estimate of Cobb.

Cobb was a unique figure in baseball. The possessor of every physical asset for greatness, he also was fortunate in having an equally keen mind. Fast, a great batsman, a wonderful base runner, a brilliant fielder, he was endowed with baseball intuition. A keen mind, and the ability to sense situations far in advance, has made Cobb a never-to-be-forgotten figure in baseball. In addition he had initiative, was aggressive and fairly teemed with color. Baseball records reveal only one Cobb; there probably will never be another.

Making the Ideal Ball Player.

As I ruminate over the many great stars I have seen in action, there comes to my mind the thought of the ideal ball player. Here is the composite player I would have if it were possible to mold together the dominating characteristics of some of the leading stars of the game. Such an ideal player would have:

The Speed of Frank Frisch. The former star of the New York Giants, now with St. Louis, is a marvel at covering ground and a wonder on the bases. He would contribute to the speed of my ideal.

The Temperament of Johnson. No star in the history of baseball has accepted the honors thrust upon him with the grace and modesty of the great Walter.

The Durability of Everett Scott. The famous shortstop of other days who played in 1391 consecutive games. No position is more dangerous to play than shortstop, but Scott, combining intelligence with ability, was immune from injury.

The Dash and Courage of Cobb. The daring style of the game's greatest player literally has carried many an opposing team off its feet. During his entire career Cobb has courted danger by the chances he insisted on taking; yet never once in his entire career has he been seriously injured.

The Brains of Eddie Collins. I regard Connie Mack's first lieutenant as the smartest ball player I ever came into contact with during my entire big league career.

The Poise of Matthewson. It is doubtful if ever a pitcher had more of that mysterious quality known as "poise" than Christy Matthewson. Nothing ever seemed to worry the "Old Master," as he was known. He always had something reserved; he was at his best in the pinch.

The Consistency of Ray Schalk. Never did I see Ray Schalk catch a poor ball game. Regardless of the score he always gave his best efforts; despite the many chances he took he was seldom injured and, for eleven year he caught one hundred or more games a season, a most remarkable record.

The Punch of Ruth. When it comes to the knockout of baseball, the making of home runs, Ruth stands in a class by himself. He is truly the "Collossus of Swat."

The Grace and Brilliance of Lajoie. In all my years of baseball no player, from the standpoint of grace and finesse, ever impressed me as did the great Larry Lajoie. Every play he made was a picture.

The Accuracy of Wagner. While lacking the gracefulness of Lajoie—as a matter of fact his style was awkward—Wagner was even more certain on a ground or fly ball, if such a thing is possible. Wagner had a remarkable pair of hands and it just seemed impossible for a ball to get away from him once that he had laid his hands on it.

There you have the ten leading points of ideal ball players. If it were possible to mold them all into one athlete, he would be the super player of all time. If I were called upon to choose one ball player from among all those I have known that, to my mind possessed more of these attributes than any other single player, I would name Walter Johnson.

Big Guns of Brooklyn Dodgers

Five members of the Brooklyn Dodgers, all batting over .300, and whose heavy work with the stick is one of the main reasons for the sensational rise of the Brooklyn team to the head of the league. MASTER MINDS' FAMOUS BONERS

McGraw Dropped Hack Wilson for Poor Hitting.

You have often heard it said that this player or that player pulled a boner on the ball field. Here are some of the boners made by the game's master minds.

McGraw traded Roush and Groh to the Reds and later bought them back at a stiff price. Roush previously (1913) was discarded by the White Sox because he couldn't throw.

Connie Mack didn't think enough of Joe Jackson to hold him in 1908.

The Detroit club refused to buy Schalk from an obscure minor league because he was too small to make a good catcher.

Tris Speaker released Stephenson from the Cleveland team in 1924.

The Yanks, Cubs and Giants underestimated O'Doul's hitting ability. He topped the National league with .398 last season.

In 1928 the Pirates shipped Joe Cronin to the minors. He's starring at short for Washington.

Dazzy Vance was a Yankee in 1916 but his worth was overlooked.

The Browns tried Charley Root in 1923 and sent him to Los Angeles.

Pat Malone would have remained a Giant if McGraw hadn't erred in 1922.

So would Hack Wilson if McGraw hadn't sent him to Toledo in 1925 because he couldn't hit.

Earle Neale of Parkersburg, W. Va., former football coach at Washington and Jefferson, West Virginia Wesleyan and University of Virginia and former player and coach with the Cincinnati Reds, has signed a contract to coach the Ironton Tanks, professional football team, next fall.

The Kentucky derby will henceforth have a battle to retain its prestige on a par with several other events of growing consequence. The American Derby, the Arlington Classic and the Belmont Stakes are the closest rivals of the Churchill Downs feature.

Of them all the real prestige ought eventually to be accorded to the Belmont derby, or "stakes," because it is at the derby distance of one and one-half miles and comes at a time when all three-year-olds will have had time to round into condition.

Ralph Lovshin, a 175-pound husky standing six feet tall, is the outstanding track man uncovered in Coach Guy Sundt's University of Wisconsin track squad. Lovshin has done 12 feet 6 inches in the pole vault, 6 feet one-half inch in the high jump and 21 feet 9 inches in the broad jump.

Joe Schultz, manager of the Houston Buffs of the Texas league, passes this on as a typical letter from the ambitious busher looking for a trial in fast company. The letter was written by an applicant to a team manager in the Texas league. In part, it follows:

"I am 5 feet 3¾ inches high and have good control. I can chuck that old apple over that there platter every inning.

"I pitched eight games last year and was winner of them all.

"I struck out 19 swingers in one game last year. Believe me, I sure had my stuff that day and was plenty good, even if I do say it myself.

"My arms are never sore. I plow most of the time and am strong aplenty, kid.

"I want to inform you that I have a real serious outcurve and a sweet incurve.

"Please see what you can do for me."

Kid Gleason, one of Connie Mack's lieutenants, is a booster for Jimmy Foxx. He says of him:

"Mark my words, Foxx is going to be the greatest ball player that ever lived and I don't bar Ruth, Cobb or any of the others. It may be by fall, too."

Chick Galloway, who was driven temporarily from baseball two years ago when he was struck on the head while watching a fellow Detroit player at batting practice, seems to have recovered and probably will play again as a regular. He had gone through the training period with the Athletics, his old team, in satisfactory shape, and while he had little opportunity to hit at the time, he was not afraid of the ball. "Why should he be plate shy?" asked one of the Athletics, "he wasn't hit at the plate. He wasn't even near the plate."

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

By GEORGE DORSEY, Ph. D., LL. D.

What Price Progress?

LIFE is easily destroyed, but the matter of life is indestructible. Life easily tires, but the energy of life is not lost. Life is dynamic. When struck—as by blow of slipper or by a chuck under the chin—a chemical reaction takes place; that reaction alters its nature. It is now something else. The change may be slight; it may be so great that its very dynamic nature is altered—the change endures for life.

Life is impelled to action because it is a reacting mechanism; certain stimuli impel it to action. What life does depends upon what life is; and that, in turn, depends upon what life does. The life that climbed up to man never ceased to recreate itself on higher levels. The oftener it reacts, the greater the ease of action; practice makes perfect. But life itself is not moved by perfection; with too much practice it grows fatigued. Had life been content with mere perfection, it would have stopped with bacteria and algae. It essayed more difficult roles and by greatly daring became man. It could not have built up a nature so imperious for power or so keen for experience had it been content to say: I desire nothing more; I am perfect.

A perfect man is as finished a product of nature as a bacterium and may be fit for Nirvana, but not to rule or to lead men.

* * *

We begin our life with a semifluid body of twenty-odd chemical elements which surrender their original nature in becoming welded into a compact organic system. This body builds itself up into a vastly complex machine of billions of individual bodies, each retaining something of its original nature, each surrendering something of its original nature that we may function as one individual being. The energy which drives this machine is chemical, the impulse which drives the machine to secure this energy is inherent in the living protoplasm of our body.

Chemical reactions in a chemical body. Of some reactions we are conscious, of most of them we are not conscious. But the living mind and the living body are inseparable and together make up the individual. We never know what is in our "mind," for the mind is the living body which, because of its nature, must react to every vital change in its environment.

Man's chief impulse at each moment of his existence is for life: self-preservation.

* * *

The culture of any people, tribe, race, or nation at any given time is an historical problem.

Each age carried its loaded situation to which human beings responded in obedience to the impulse to live. Every age had its modes, norms, habits opinions, manners, customs, taboos, and its written and unwritten codes of behavior.

Every age thought itself wise and prattled of "progress"; and lagged from one to one hundred decades behind its own wisdom. Our national habits and social, educational, legal and governmental institutions jog along in ruts worn smooth by our forefathers. There is not a city in the United States organized as a community for the purposes of living, almost no individual that practices what he preaches or puts to useful purpose a tenth part of his brains.

Our civilization as the "product of all the ages" loses much of its glamor when viewed against the background of what an ordinary boy or girl can learn in two score years.

* * *

Tokyo, Peking, Delhi, Cairo, Rome, London, New York, Main Street; random sample words. Into these life comes in small packages called babies, fundamentally all alike, all human, all blood-kin, all of one species. They have the same general adjustment mechanism in the same excitable protoplasm, with the same instinct for life and the same emotional-drive equipment. And all have parents to tide them over the infantile period until such time as their motor mechanism will enable them to seek their own food, water, and shelter, and in general make their own adjustments including picking a mate.

These same babies one, five, twenty, fifty years later show difference more than skin deep, differences burned into the very protoplasm of their bodies. Which means: their habits are different, their tongues are different, their thoughts are different. They doff their hats to different gods and play the game of life in different ways and for different stakes.

Into each home the baby comes as a loaded stimulus. It may be hailed as the watcher greets the dawn; or with, "Well, here it is"; or as another mouth to feed. Its arrival is a complex of stimuli. Out of these the baby is often made or broken the day it is born—a chance that must be taken these days as the price of the opportunity to become civilized.

Most of them do. Some never become adjusted. They die, as Socrates, Savonarola, Lavoisier; or they are fed to the lions by Nero, disappear on St. Bartholomew's day, or work in a factory. They borrow, beg, or steal. There are as many ways and degrees of unadjustment as there are of adjustment, all graduated to the ways and degrees to which adjustment is demanded.

Plants Once Esteemed Lost to Modern Times

Time was, of course, when learning was very precious and medical lore such as it was was bound up in the monastic orders of the medieval churches, when the cloisters alone contained many rare plants, raised for their savor or their medical properties.

The breaking up of the monasteries in England meant the scattering of these plants where the four winds carried their seeds. And some of the plants which had been esteemed became wild things which people gathered. Many of the country housewives' gardens began to blossom with the cresses and other plants which are either esteemed for their edible or their medical virtues.

Of course, in all ages men have sought the plants of the woods and the fields. The Indians and our pioneer ancestors knew the properties of many plants which have escaped us. Things which we now regard as poisonous were esteemed. Let us not forget that the potato was a tuber of a poisonous plant—transported from Indian soil and lore to Europe.

How Do You Like Redwood City?

A man was asked sometime ago how he liked Redwood City. His reply contained much food for thought. He said in reply to the question: "I like any town that provides me an opportunity to make an honest living."

Altho this man makes no pretension of being an outstanding citizen in the community, his reply is worthy of a philosopher's wisdom. Incidentally, it might be stated that he has found the secret of happiness. Following up his philosophy he will experience contentment, which is sought by so many and found by so few.

It certainly is a fact that any man or woman should like a town that makes it possible for him or her to make a living Making a living is what most of us are interested in at this time, and when Redwood City gives this opportunity we should be grateful and like the town There may be things about the community we would like to see different. That is true of any community where one goes. But if Redwood City is giving us the opportunity to make a living, the town is surely entitled to our gratitude and is worthy of any boosting we may give it.

They Just Don't Take Chances

The really good automobile driver is the one that avoids the unavoidable collisions. He doesn't count too strongly on the good judgment and intelligence of the fellow he is meeting or passing.

When the crash comes and, with shattered glass flying around, the car goes into the ditch, and the crowd collects and the ambuance's siren is heard afar off—it is too late then to consider how it happened.

Be Careful What You Sign

This is supposed to be a sophisticated "show-me" generation, but when were there more "rackets" being worked, all on assumption that there are plenty of "easy marks," than right now? One of the newest is a "prohibition racket." It takes the form of securing signatures to petitions asking repeal of the 18th amendment, the solicitor attempting to collect money from each person approached to sign, for which is given a "certificate" of membership in some organization. According to the Washington Better Business Bureau, there is no such organization, and the scheme is a clever hoax to catch the unwary.

Truth

The reason Youth makes so many mistakes, is that it is trying to find out what is the truth—this takes many years and by the time one learns, it is time to die! Shakespeare said, "I'll put nothing into my mouth to steal away my brain."

Yet Modern Youth thinks it is smart to drink! When health is wrecked; when that divine gift, a brilliant brain, has been dulled by poison of alcohol, Youth will have learned that Shakespeare knew the truth.

It takes a woman's sewing circle to develop a lot of conversational halitosis.

Secretary Hyde Urges Abandonment of Land

Secretary of Agriculture Hyde has issued a recommendation that farmers of poorer lands abandon millions of acres, both for their own benefit and for the benefit of agriculture in general.

In a stirring appeal, contained in an article by Secretary Hyde in The Country Home, he declares that this vast acreage of poor farm land is a detriment to the prosperity of the country and to that of those who live upon it. He recommends that the land be planted in trees, or, if not, be allowed to lie fallow until the soil has built itself up.

"There are millions of acres of lands in the United States," says Hyde, "which, because of location, soil exhaustion or natural infertility, cannot be made to produce a living equal to the American standard. These are known as sub-marginal lands. From the standpoint of national agricultural efficiency, they ought not to be farmed. They tend to lower the standard of living and educational standards of the farmer who tills them. They should be taken out of production, reforested and held until some coming generation needs them.

"To farm these now returns no profit to the farmer, but serves in the aggreate to increase the surplus and depress prices, whereas they might be valuable to future generations if properly preserved."

Sunshine

The Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls and other exponents of the out-of-doors are enjoying benefits of life in the open. They see the things of the world in a new light and understand nature better. They meet friends in the same cause, swap stories and form congenial companships. Every student of the big outdoors gets new object lessons, makes new resolves and forms new links of character with the day of sunshine.

Sunshine is the test of summer time. It ripens the grain and fruit and gives strength to the camper. All nature has a smiling face when the sun causes the plants to grow, the flowers to open and the fruits to mature. Sunshine induces youth to get out, amid the fields and forests, drink in the pure air and enjoy the healthfulness of exercises in the open.

There are profits in sunshine that one does not always reckon on when planning an outing in the open. It creates beauty and attractiveness and thereby adds to efficiency and usefulness. It helps in fitting one for future work and inculcates a desire for keeping young in order to continue enjoying the playfields of youth. Yes, there are countless benefits to be derived from mingling with the all-outdoors. The sun paints smiles on the cheeks of humanity in unerasible lines.

Rolph in the South

An outstanding figure in the civic movement in Los Angeles for the past 25 years and a resident of that city for nearly 45 years, Walter Leeds, prominent attorney, was this week nemed executive chairman of the southern California Rolph campaign committee. Leeds has been identified in Republican circles for many years.

Selection of Leeds was announced by Harry Sperb, northern California campaign manager. His post will be one of the most important in the Rolph campaign for the Republican nomination of governor.

"Republicans of California can do nothing else but select as its nominee for Governor Mayor James Rolph, Jr.," said Leeds. "His public record as Mayor of San Francisco for nearly twenty years has qualified him to meet all problems confronting our great state. He will bring to the office of Governor vision and far sightedness for the future growth of our state, together with acknowledged executive ability which has stamped him as a proven public official. From my observations there seems to be no doubt of his selection as the Republican nominee for governor August 26."

Mayor Rolph expressed himself as being delighted with the selection of Leeds.

BRUSH FIRES SWEEP OVER FIFTY ACRES IN EMERALD LAKE REGION

About fifty acres of land between Emerald Lake and Woodside were burned over in a brush fire Tuesday evening. The fire originated on the lands of Leonard & Holt, and is believed to have been caused by a picnic party. The Woodside fire department was called and fought the fire for more than an hour before it was brought under control.

At about 6 o'clock a second fire, possibly caused by some smouldering material from the former fire was discovered by Chief Volpiano of the Woodside fire district, and the Woodside men again fought fire. This time it was completely extinguished. While the area burned over was large, little or no damage resulted from the fires.

"All Quiet On The Western Front," Universal's stupendous, graphic and truthful presentation on the screen of Erich Maria Remarque's sensational book, will open Tuesday at the Sequoia Theatre.

Remarque's book, regarded as the greatest human document of the war, has broken all publishing records and has been translated in almost every language. No story ever pictured has had as many readers.

Universal presents "All Quiet" as a super picture production and directed with the aim of carrying the greatness of the book to the screen, truthfully and without magnification, maintaining all the powerful drama and intense human interest of the Remarque narrative. There is a stirring sequence of romantic appeal in which Remarque's school boy soldiers have a midnight rendezvous with the girls across the canal. This is as Remarque wrote it and it is a beautiful interlude of young love in the midst of war.

Lewis Milestone, one of the youngest and most prominent directors of pictures, directed "All Quiet." A sterling cast was chosen by Milestone and Carl Laemmel, Jr., and nothing was spared to make this the greatest of all pictures of the war, exactly as the book was the greatest book of the war.

Louis Wolheim, famous for his creation of the role of "Captain Flagg" in the stage production of "What Price Glory" and for his screen characterizations, and Lewis Ayres, a brillian youngster of 20, head the excellent cast. Wolheim has the role of "Katezinsky" and Ayres the role of the leading character, "Paul."

Others in the cast are Russell Gleason, William Bakewell, Scott Kolk, Walter Browne Rogers, Ben Alexander and Owen Davis, Jr., as the six comrades of "Paul"; John Wray, noted New York actor; George "Slim" Summerville, Harold Goodwin, Richard Alexander, Arnold Lucy, Pat Collins, Bill Irving, Yola D'Avril, Poupee Andriot and Renee Damonde.

The store of "All Quiet" is based on the experience and observations of Remarque who went to the front as a schoolboy. Every character is authentic and every incident. Critics have proclaimed the grim realness of the book the secret of its record-breaking success and it is this powerful appeal that Universal has brought to the screen.

In his own words, Remarque wrote "All Quiet" to free himself from the memory of the war. It was only after he had completed the novel that he tried to sell it. He wrote simply setting down the story of his own experiences—without glamor of heroics. And his book became the best seller of the past ten years.

The battle scenes of "All Quiet," in which more than two thousand soldiers, war veterans of all nationalities, participated are the most spectacular and yet the most genuine ever pictured. They are the war as it actually was fought and not as sideline observers imagined it.

The story opens with "Paul" and his comrades enlisting in the hysterial of patriotism and carries on as one after the other is killed. As the book is outspoken so is the picture. Through all the stark realism of war and the shattering of the lives and illusions of Remarque's schoolboys runs the golden thread of human understanding and true comradeship.

"All Quiet" was adapted to the screen by George Abbott and Maxwell Anderson, co-author of "What Price Glory." It required more than three months of actual photography and cost more than a million dollars in the making.

In order to assist in advertising this great war picture, the fife and drum corps of the local American Legion Post will parade through town Tuesday evening, and will play before the Sequoia Theatre.

Birth Rate For California Now On Upward Turn

148 Babies Born in San Mateo County During First Three Months

By ELWOOD SQUIRES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, June 19.—(UP)—Another sign of return of prosperity—the 1930 baby production in California is definitely on the increase.

San Mateo county shared in the boom, with 148 additions to the population during the first three months of this year, according to the state department of public health.

A total of 21,056 babies were born in the state during this period, compared with 19,298 for the same months in 1929.

"Fluctuations in the birth rate are guided by no known formula," declared Dr. Walter M. Dickie, head of the department.

"Apparently 1930 is going to be a banner year for California in this respect. Births have been steadily declining since 1924, when the state reached a peak of 22.2 per 1000 population.

"Last year the rate fell to 18.3 the lowest recorded in ten years. So the line is evidently going to start upward in another cycle during 1930."

Mexican births have not shown the slump that white births took since 1924. In fact, the department figures show a steady increase, statring at 14.2 per 1000 in 1926, and if the present rate is maintained it will top 18.2 during 1930.

"There is certainly no tendency on the part of Mexican families to cut down on number of offsprings," said Dr. Dickie.

"While American births have been dropping off steadily the Mexican population is being increased in a far greater proportion."

Fortunately for California, the full total of 21,056 babies born up to April 1 were included in the 1930 census. All were ordered counted by the census takers, who began their compilation of population on that date.

Burlingame Man Seeks Election To Co. Coroner

William Crosby Will Oppose Dr. McGovern For Office

William Crosby, Burlingame undertaker, will be a candidate for the office of coroner and public administrator, it was announced yesterday by officers of the Crosby for Coroner Club. General headquarters will be maintained in Burlingame with offices in every city in the county. He is sponsored by M. G. McClinton, former mayor of Burlingame, presidents of women's clubs, and prominent people throughout the county.

William Crosby

Mayor Charles A. Buck of Burlingame, a member of the club, points to Crosby's work as chairman of the Burlingame park and playground commission for the past six years. Thomas Breeze, prominent attorney of Hillsborough, and president of the board of trustees of the San Mateo Union High School and Junior College District, cites Crosby's excellent record and mature judgment as a member of that board.

Crosby's statement is as follows:

"I desire to announce my candidacy for the office of coroner and public administrator of San Mateo county to be decided at the primary election in August of this year. Owing to my profession as an undertaker, I am fully equipped to perform the exacting duties of coroner, which should consist of maintaining an office twenty-four hours a day and be at all times ready to immediately hold inquests over the remains of deceased persons. In holding these inquests it is necessary to have inquest rooms that will accomodate a large number of witnesses, and others interested in the case, which I have.

"An impression prevails in some quarters of this county that the coroner must by law be a physician. This is erroneous, as the coroner must sit as a judge and has only the power to call in a physician and surgeon to perform autopsies when necessary. This is borne out by the fact that in all the counties of the state there is only one coroner who is a physician, and that is in San Francisco county. That the members of my profession are recognized by the electorate of the state as proper persons to conduct the coroner's office will cite that 46 counties in California now have coroners who are undertakers, the balance who are not undertakers are recruited from various walks of life, San Mateo county now being served by a dentist.

"The public administrator chiefly handles the estates of persons dying without heirs whose estates escheat to the state of California, or where heirs live in foreign jurisdictions. To conserve these estates, it is necessary to immediately take possession of the effects of such deceased persons, which I believe can be better attended to by an undertaker, as he is the first on the scene. These estates are all handled through the superior court which approves the accounts of the public administrator before distribution is made. It is on account of close relations of the duties of the public administrator and Coroner that they have been united and held in this county by a single official.

"I respectfully submit my name to the electorate of San Mateo County and trust for their favorable consideration."

Crosby will oppose in the coming primary election Dr. J. C. McGovern, whose announcement of intention to run for re-election was made two weks ago.

TRUE TALES OF THE TELEPHONE

Mechanical Martyrs

Machines, as well as men, sometimes sacrifice their lives for the good of the telephone service. These are the pieces of equipment subjected to "accelerated life tests" at the Bell Telephone Laboratories. By means of specially designed apparatus, they are given, in a short time, treatment closely simulating that of a long period of hard use in actual service.

Transmitters are connected with phonographs that talk into them continuously; receivers are raised and dropped, over and over again, into their hooks; telephone cords are twisted and stretched thousands of times; felt pads on the bottoms of telephone instruments are rubbed back and forth, as if on the top of a desk, until they disintegrate.

The number of operations before the failure of the item being tested is carefully recorded and thus there is obtained, in a few weeks or months, the concentrated experience of years of use in commercial service. These pieces of equipment live short lives, but die gloriously. They are martyrs to the cause of making a nation-wide service more and more dependable.

Menlo Park

Captain Jimmie Logan of the state traffic squad of San Mateo county left for Sacramento on Thursday to attend the California highway patrol training school for 15 days. The primary reason for the school is to educate members of the highway patrol on the provisions of the state motor vehicle act and better train them for their work on the highway. Jack Quinlan will be acting captain of the squad in Logan's absence.

The Allied Arts Company has started work on one of the units of buildings to cost $200,000 on the property recently bought from the Murray heirs. An art magazine, now printed in Chicago, is to be printed here when the buildings are completed.

The sad ending of John Orton at San Carlos on Monday has caused profound sorrow here, where he resided until a short time ago. He was a veteran of the late war and saw service at the front in France, where he was shell shocked. Mr. Orton was a member of Menlo Parlor N. S. G. W., and a native of this county. He was beloved by all who knew him. Honest, loyal and true to his friends, he enjoyed a wide circle of acquaintances who were devoted to him.

F. J. Furnivall, the furniture dealer, is erecting a two-story building, to be used in connection with his business on the corner of Mills avenue and Oak Grove avenue.

The Forty Hours Devotion began in Corpus Christi Monastery yesterday and the services will continue until tomorrow. On account of this being the golden jubilee of the founding of the institution in this country, there is an unusual interest in the exercises. Large crowds from all points of the peninsula are attending the solemn service.

The state highway commission is soon to award the contract for completing the Bayshore boulevard from Redwood City to the Embarcadero back to Palo Alto.

Nick Whalen, a local contractor, left during the week for Seattle for an indefinite period. That city was his former home.

The last will and testament of Major-General Devol was filed in Redwood City last week for probate. The will leaves all the estate to the wife of the deceased. The petition does not state the value of the estate except that it exceeds the sum of $10,000. It is believed the holdings will run over $100,000.

The city council met in regular session Tuesday evening to consider a weed ordinance. No action was taken in the matter. All property owners are to be notified of their failure to burn the weds from their property. All will be penalized for not complying with the law.

Constable Jack Grill has filed his nomination papers and will seek re-election. He probably will have no opponent. Grill has made a splendid official and should be retained in office.

Weeden Brothers have begun the work of erecting a barn and other buildings on the Roy N. Bishop estate at Woodside. Bishop is a former executive of the Sperry Flour Company. The work when finished will cost in the neighborhood of $25,000.

Francis Johnson, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Johnson of Menlo Park, a senior at Stanford, left for Camp Lewis this week as a second lieutenant in the Ordinance Department of the U. S. Government as a representative of Stanford. Seventeen other students will go in training there. The young soldiers will spend three weeks at Camp Lewis and three weeks at Camp Kearney. They will receive soldiers' pay while training. Young Johnson is majoring in electrical engineering. The experience in the ordinance department will aid him in his chosen profession.

The committee in charge of the N. S. G. W. and N. D. G. W. picnic at Portola on Sunday, July 13, is working diligently to make the affair a success. Mrs. Isabelle Weeden Lindquist, president of the Native Daughters, waited on Mayor Rolph recently and extended him an invitation to attend the picnic. Here is what she says about the mayor: "To my surprise and delight the busy man will be able to attend and will be our guest of honor on that occasion."

The Menlo Park Rolf-for-Governor Club met Friday evening last, and arranged for a strenuous campaign in this locality for the popular mayor. Headquarters were secured. Litearature, buttons, and automobile stickers may be had at the office of W. E. Monroe, secretary of the organiaztion.

Conty Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese has appointed W. E. Monroe a deputy registrar here. Those wishing to register for the aproaching primaries must do so by July 2. Get your name on the big book at once.

Miss Mary Weston, accompanied by her mother, left on Monday to spend her vacation at San Cruz by the seashore.

James G. Mason and family have opened their house at Seabright for the summer months.

Mrs. Catherine Derry and Mrs. C. T. Maloney of Menlo Park are attending the Native Daughters' convention at the Hotel Leamington in Oakland.

Telephone Topics

Believe It or Not

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stroehle of Idaho Springs, Colo., have a Boston bulldog which they claim answers the telephone. He is called Cody, named, doubtless, after that world-renowned western character, Colonel William F. Cody or "Buffalo Bill" as he was better known.

Cody has a penchant for straying away from home. He likes to ramble and often takes himself for a ramble and he usually winds up at the garage of which his master is proprietor, selecting one of the best cars in which to take a comfortable nap. Whenever Mrs. Stroehle misses Cody for a considerable length of time, she calls up the garage. One of the attendants calls the dog from his resting place and then holds the telephone receiver against his ear. As soon as Cody hears his mistress' voice, telling him to come right home, he invariably does so.

Another Dog Story

There's a small telephone exchange in the beautiful hill town of Grafton, Mass., where a thoroughbred collie, Laddie by name, acts as Assistant Night Operator for his owner, Miss Helen Quille, the Telephone Oprator.

The dog invariably accompanies her to the exchange and stays with her during all the night trick, with the result that she never feels timid or lonely when Laddie is on guard. Sometimes during the long night hours when calls are few and far between, Miss Quille gets the chance to relax a little bit. It is then that Laddie assumes responsibility, and whenever the drop falls on the board, he at once begins growling and barking, and should his mistress be lying on the couch, he will grab the blanket and yank it to the floor in an instant. By no possibility could any emergency call ever get by Laddie.

A Polar Discovery

There is a mystery in Wisconsin which bids fair to rival the Charlie Ross disappearance of so many years ago, and might even be classed with the answer to the question "How old is Ann?"

It seems that some automobilist crashed into and broke a telephone pole on the Chicago-Milwaukee line. The broken pole was discovered by a section line man who later returned with another pole to replace the broken one. Upon his arrival at the location, to his astonishment he found a nice new pole had been set in place, and whoever had done the work had made a first class job of it. It had evidently been done by someone who understood the job, but the telephone people at Racine and also at Kenosha denied any knowledge of it, so that the natural assumption is that the people who broke the pole secured another and came back and replaced it.

Tax Problems Tax Minds of Tax Committee

State Body Ponders Way To Lessen Tax Burden Of California

By Elwood Squires

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 19, (UP)—A faint stir of life was noted in the legislative tax committee last week, when Edward Glass, appraisal expert was named secretary for the committee.

It was the first indication since last December that this body, charged with investigating the tax problem in California, was making progress. The last legislature, which created the committee, asked for a report at the next legislative session, in January, 1931.

Perhaps the committee members can throw their machine into "high" now and take full advantage of the seven months remaining to complete a report for the legislature. Some report, at least, will be forthcoming for presentation to the lawmakers.

Meantime, tax subjects have been receiving vigorous attention in some quarters and neglect in others.

Farm organizations and real estate men are continuing their valiant efforts to devise some means of lessening the tax burden on property. Some worthwhile discussions and articles have resulted so far, and doubtless the next legislature will hear from these groups.

Candidates for the office of governor have avoided the subject so far. Governor Young did not even mention taxes in his platform. District Attorney Fitts has discussed the matten in a few speeches, but in generalities. Mayor Rolph has not put forward any ideas on the state tax system as yet.

One can hardly blame the trio for their shyness. There is no question but that taxes will play an important part in state politics during the next two years. Rather than make wild commitments too early in the game, they are attempting to find "which way the wind is blowing."

So the public must wait for campaign discussions of the personal income tax, a luxury tax, severance tax, relief of property, etc.

Dixwell Pierce, secretary of the state board of equalization, returned from Washington last week, after a conference there on proposed changes in federal law, regarding state taxation of banks.

He was anything but optimistic on the outlook and predicted California must struggle along with the half million dollars a year it now receives in bank taxes. Return to the five million dollar total which the bank formerly paid in in the distant future, Pierce believes.

FUNERAL HELD FOR VETERAN SUICIDE

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon for John Robert Orton, who took his own life Monday in the garage of his home in San Carlos. Services were conducted by Menlo Parlor N. S. G. W., and were attended by members of Redwood City Post No. 105 American Legion. Interment was in the family plot at Cypress Lawn cemetery.

Orton was found dead in his garage Monday by J. E. Ellis, a neighbor. He had fastened a shotgun in the bench vice and, while standing in front of it, had pushed the trigger with a lath. A note was found in which he said, "This is an awful thing to do, but I cannot stand the strain any longer I ask all my friends to forgive me this awful act. I want the Masonic lodge to look after my father."

Orton was shell shocked and gassed in the war, and had been under a physician's care for years. He was a patient of the late Dr Ross, and it was while his father was attending the funeral of Dr Ross that he ended his life It is believed that the death of the physician may have caused the depression of mind which resulted in his suicide

A dance will be held tomorrow evening in the Masonic Temple by the club room commitee of Redwood City Lodge No. 168 F. & A. M.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1929-30 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright, 1929, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 35

One of the charms of Auction is the element of the unexpected. Big hands that are apparently unbeatable, are beaten. Ordinary hands that look most unpromising often turn out to contain the exact cards to produce wonderful results. Here are two fine examples. Number One shows what often happens to the apparently unbeatable hand, and Number Two shows how an ordinary hand turns out to be a little slam.

Example Hand No. 1

	Hearts — 9, 8, 3 Clubs — 8, 6, 3 Diamonds — Q, 9, 8, 6 Spades — 9, 8, 5
Hearts — 5 Clubs — A, K, 10 Diamonds — J, 7, 4, 3, 2 Spades — 10, 7, 6, 3	Y A B Z	Hearts — 7, 6, 2 Clubs — 5 Diamonds — A, 10, 5 Spades — A, K, Q, J, 4, 2
	Hearts — A, K, Q, J, 10, 4 Clubs — Q, J, 9, 7, 4, 2 Diamonds — K Spades — none

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and, when he looked at his hand, he had the comforting thought "Here's a wonderful hand that ought to win the rubber". But see what happened to him: He made an original bid of four hearts, A and Y passed and B, of course, bid four spades, the bid Z was trying to shut out.

Z now correctly bid five clubs, to show his other suit and thus give his partner the choice between hearts and clubs. A, of course, doubled five clubs and Y bid five hearts. This bid is correct, although his holding in hearts and clubs is practically the same. His partner had already shown his preference for hearts so Y should do likewise so long as both suits are of the same strength.

B now bid five spades and Z began to wonder if his wonderful hand was really so wonderful after all. A's double of five clubs indicated that the top clubs were against him and that a bid of six hearts couldn't be made; but, on the other hand, it looked as if A B could make five spades. For that reason Z decided to bid six hearts, not with any idea of making it, but solely as a justifiable overbid to save game and rubber. A doubled and all passed.

In the play, A B must win three club and one diamond tricks, so that Y Z lose their contract by three tricks, less 100 honors, or a net loss of 200 points. That it was a good sacrifice is apparent for Y Z easily could have made five spades. Z, however, was very downcast for his apparently unbeatable hand had cost him 200 points.

Example Hand No. 2

	Hearts — Q, J, 7 Clubs — 4 Diamonds — A, 9, 7, 6 Spades — A, J, 7, 6, 2
Hearts — 4, 2 Clubs — 6, 5, 2 Diamonds — J, 4, 2 Spades — K, 10, 5, 4, 3	Y A B Z	Hearts — K, 6, 3 Clubs — A, J, 10, 7, 3 Diamonds — Q, 8, 3 Spades — Q, 8
	Hearts — A, 10, 9, 8, 5 Clubs — K, Q, 9, 8 Diamonds — K, 10, 5 Spades — 9

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one heart. This is an ordinary average hand so Z had no idea of any great success with it but just watch how it develops. A passed and Y bid one spade. B bid two clubs and Z bid two no trumps. A passed and Y bid three hearts. All passed and A opened the four of spades.

Z won this trick in Y's hand with the ace and led the four of clubs. B won this trick with the ace of clubs and led back the trey of hearts. Z let this run up to Y's hand and won the trick with the seven of hearts. Three tricks have now been played. How should Z play the balance so that he will score a small slam against any defense? Think this over before you read the following:

Solution: At trick four, Z should lead the deuce of spades from Y's hand and trump in his own hand with the eight of hearts. At tricks five and six, Z should lead the king and queen of clubs and discard the six and seven of diamonds from Y's hand. At trick seven Z should lead a low diamond from his hand and win the trick in Y's hand with the ace. At trick eight, he should lead the nine of diamonds from Y's hand and win the trick in his own hand with the king. At trick nine he should lead the ten of diamonds and trump in Y's hand with the jack of hearts.

At trick ten Z should lead the six of spades from Y's hand and trump in his own hand with the nine of hearts. On this lead of spades, B should discard a club. He cannot trump or he will surely lose his king of hearts and so make the small slam easy for Z. At trick eleven, Z should lead the losing club from his hand and trump in Y's hand with the queen of hearts. At trick twelve, B has left the king six of hearts and Z has the ace ten. Z must win the last two tricks.

Played in this way, and A B have no defense, Y Z must make a small slam. In other words, Z's ordinary average hand turned out to be a wonderful hand, due to a good break of luck and skillful play. Never despair of a bad hand or exult over a good one, for you never can tell until the cards are played out what the result will be.

Problem No. 29

	Hearts — 8, 6, 3, 2 Clubs — Q, 8 Diamonds — J, 5 Spades — none
Hearts — A, 7, 5 Clubs — 7, 2 Diamonds — 4, 2 Spades — 5	Y A B Z	Hearts — K Clubs — 6, 5 Diamonds — Q, 6 Spades — 10, 6, 2
	Hearts — Q, J, 10 Clubs — none Diamonds — K, 9 Spades — Q, 9, 7

Diamonds are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win seven of the eight tricks against any defense? Solution in the next article.

The Making Of An Ideal Candidate For Governor

The administration of an important public office is a trying job.

The head of a great corporation has frequently only his board of directors as his critics, but the Mayor of a great city has literally hundreds of thousands of critics watching his every move.

Figuratively speaking every time the Mayor tilts an eyebrow, draws in his breath or fastens his suspenders the action causes a ripple of comment in the citizenry of the city.

Powerful figures in the electorate, still more powerful organizations, legislative and executive institutions are affected by the Mayor's position or official action on every issue that comes up for decision. The Mayor is counselled, cautioned, warned, advised, threatened, appealed to, instructed, ordered and forbidden times without number during his administration. He is reached directly through his waiting room, through the legislative counsel chambers, through the phone, behind telephone poles and over the transom of his office. His is a job that demands rare qualities of judgment, a consideration of every want of his fellow man, a sense of infinite fairness, an intuition that prevents the slightest wounding of the feelings of those with whom he comes in contact.

The test of a good public official is when he can be re-elected to office. His re-election stamps him as a qualified public official who has demonstrated his worth and satisfied his constituency. Few public officials however can "make the grade" for a second term. Fewer indeed for a third term.

Mayor James Rolph, Jr., has been elected Mayor of San Francisco, not once or twice, but five successive terms!

A record like that means that he has no bosses; that he is everybody's mayor, that he has administered his office with a degree of fairness and wisdom that stamps him as an eminently qualified candidate for an even higher office than that which he holds. To preside over a great metropolis like San Francisco for nearly twenty years stamps Rolph as the ideal candidate for Governor.

The affairs of a large city are akin to the affairs of a state. The institutions of administration—executive, legislative and judicial are the same. There are the same problems of employment, of commerce, of health, of public works, of education, of laws that there are in the state.

Mayor Rolph has come from a crucible rare indeed in the annals of city government. He has brought the city through the perils of the post-earthquake period in such manner that has made it the Wall Street of the west, a metropolis of prosperity.

Mayor Rolph can do for the state of California what he has done for the city of San Francisco .

With no bosses, the tool of no one faction or combination of factions, intimately acquainted with every section of the state of California, he has unquestionably qualified himself now for the office of Governor of California —the one ideal candidate!

COUNTY ENGINEER IN RACE FOR RE-ELECTION

County Engineer Kneese

To the Voters of San Mateo County:

Having served the people of San Mateo county as surveyor and engineer for twelve years, I respectfully submit my candidacy for re-election to that office.

In doing so I want first to express my gratitude to the electorate of this county for the opportunity I have been afforded to render service in its recent tremendous development.

As shown by the census report, in no part of California has more substantial improvement occurred, and it is evident to all that we are now on the eve of much greater and wider progress. It is a matter of great pride to me that my office has played its part in aiding and in some measure expediting this progress.

In rapidly growing communities facilities, highway needs, sewage disposal, street improvements, traffic problems relating to transportation regulation, etc., are frequently pressing and difficult and must be competently handled. Otherwise progress is definitely retarded.

To meet this situation, and to keep pace with present and prospective development, I have perfected a working force which I hold is second to none in California, in that its service has always been prompt, always watchful of the economical expediture of public moneys, always insisted on the highest class of work being done and the best possible return to the tax-payer for the moneys expended. All progressive improvements cost money. The test is in giving the tax-payer and property owner value received for every dollar paid out.

It has been my good fortune to have been a resident of this county all my life, and I esteem the confidence and respect of its citizens in fullest measure. If, by your support, I am continued in office, I will diligently and faithfully put forth my best efforts and that of my office organization to keep San Mateo County in its high place or progress, and its economic interests carefully safeguarded.

Respectfully,
GEORGE A. KNEESE

Dr. Thompson Files Papers For Election

Pescadero Man To Seek Place On Board To Represent Burlingame

Nomination papers were filed in the office of County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese Tuesday afternoon by Dr. C. V. Thompson, of Pescadero. Dr. Thompson will be a candidate to succeed himself for the position of supervisor of the Fifth township.

By reason of the re-districting ordinance passed Monday by the board of supervisors, the Fifth township will be shifted to Burlingame immediately after the election, but while elected by Pescadero and its environs, Dr. Thompson, if elected, and there at present appears to be no opposition, will represent Burlingame on the board of supervisors. If re-elected supervisor of the Fifth township, Dr. Thompson will be Burlingame's representative until 1935, provided that he does not see fit to resign in two years and enter the field against Manuel Francis as supervisor of the Fourth township, which will at that time include the present Fifth township and Dr. Thompson's home town of Pescadero.

More Telephone Comfort Marks the Modern Home

The Portable Telephone

WHEN the modern architect designs a home he must plan for adequate telephone wiring. Nowadays the comfort and convenience of the household and its guests, require that there shall be plenty of telephones conveniently placed so that they may render the greatest possible service with the least effort on the part of the telephone user.

Extension telephones are provided, placed at convenient points where the requirements of the household demand permanently located instruments. Telephone outlets are also placed in various rooms, into which portable telephone sets may be plugged as convenience so requires. The telephone "outlet" is simply a "jack" or switch into which the plug attached to the flexible cord of the portable telephone is inserted, thus connecting the instrument with a telephone circuit.

In the larger homes where many servants are kept and numerous guests are entertained, an intercommunicating telephone system is included in the house plans.

New Bus Service In Operation On Peninsula Lines

Rearrangement of local service between San Francisco and San Jose affording fast through services by motorcoach to all Peninsula communities became effective last Sunday.

During the peak hours of the day fast through service will leave San Francisco and San Jose on the hour via Bayshore highway. These motorcoacheswill stop on flag at South San Francisco, Mills Field and Third avenue, San Mateo, for local passengers. Otherwise the first stop leaving San Francisco will be Broadway in Redwood City. There will be no stops on the northbound trip between Broadway, Redwood City, and San Francisco with the exception of the flag stops noted, H. A. Wooster, general traffic manager of Pacific Greyhound Lines, said.

Fast through service leaving both San Francisco and San Jose on thirty minutes after the hour will operate via Mission street and El Camino Real. These motorcoaches will stop north of Redwood City only to receive and discharge passengers from and to Redwood City and south.

Thirty minute local service will be continued on Mission street and El Camino Real, leaving San Francisco on the hour and half hour, serving all points between San Francisco and Palo Alto, Wooster said.

An hourly local service will also be operated between San Francisco and San Mateo, via Bayshore highway and East Broadway, Burlingame. These motorcoaches will leave San Francisco on the half hour and will leave San Mateo 45 minutes past the hour, according to Wooster.

In addition to these services, an hourly service has been established between Mountain View Junction and Sunnyvale Junction making conections with main line coaches and providing direct service to and from Mountain View and Sunnyvale to and from both San Jose and San Francisco and intermediate points.

Walking "League of Nations"

Washington.—What will the well-dressed business man wear this summer?

London and New York haberdashers have their own answer to that question; geography predicts he will wear the products of 20 foreign countries, more or less.

"If bright national labels were pasted on the pieces of masculine wearing apparel wholly or partly of foreign origin, the well-dressed business man would look like a trunk just returned from a world tour of the best hotels," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"From top to the toe this American, attired for the street, is a walking economic League of Nations.

"He may declare that his hat came from Danbury, Conn., his shirt and collar from Troy, N. Y., his necktie from Paterson, N. J., his coat and trousers from a local tailor, his fountain pen from Chicago, his money from a United States mint, and his shoes from Massachusetts; but that isn't half of it.

"Take his hat, for example. It may have been made in Italy, Ecuador or the Philippines. If it was made in the United States, the straw probably came from abroad, from Switzerland, Italy, China or Japan. In one recent year the United States imported 360,000 miles of braided straw for hats.

"The leather sweatband probably came from a New Zealand sheep; the filmy gauze of cotton net under the crown from England.

"His collar, a trim, gleaming collar that resists wilting, probably owes much of its stability to long staple cotton from Egypt. Extra fine shirts also have in their weaves long staple cotton, possibly grown in Arizona or among the lowlands of the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida, or in the British West Indies, but more probably in Egypt.

"The silk of the necktie comes from Japan, of course; but if it is one of the cheap variety, sort of stiff, the kind that looks fine the first time it is tied, bad the second, terrible the third, then it is probably loaded with tin from Singapore.

"His coat, his light summer coat of mohair, is Turkey's and India's and Ecuador's gift to America. Mohair from Turkish goats, jute (burlap) cloth lining from the Ganges delta to make the coat hold its shape, and tagua buttons from Ecuador or Colombia.

"The entangling alliances of this American's feet are indeed wonderful to contemplate. Four continents, at the very least, annually save millions of United States citizens from pattering around barefoot.

"Now for a look in the business man's pocket. That fountain pen with a bright case of casein—where did it come from? From a cow, not an American cow, in all probability, but an Argentine cow, because in Argentina there is a smaller demand for milk for food than in the United States. Casein for pens and similar objects is solidified milk. The gold of the pen point may be American—or it may be South African. The very point of the pen, the part he writes with, is not gold, but iririum most likely from the platinum mines of Soviet Russia's Ural mountains.

"The yellow pencil in the coat pocket has a lead of American or Mexican graphite, and paint colored by Rhodesian chrome yellow, bound by American or Argentinian linseed oil, and provided with a durable surface by lac from India, perhaps, or tung oil from far up the Yangtze in China, or kauri gum from New Zealand bogs.

"Paper of his pocket memo pad may be all-American; more probably it is Canadian. Cigarettes are doubtless of American tobacco with a pinch of Turkish tobacco from Greek Macedonia, too, it may be, and wrapped in cigarette paper from France. And the good American money in his wallet and his pocket, an American product surely! But no, the green of the greenback is chrome green made from Rhodesia or Mozambique chrome. He may shun a Canadian dime, but never a Canadian nickel, for nearly all our nickels are Canadian. The chief U. S. A. contributions to a nickel are the Indian and the buffalo."

Yale Fund

Every once in a while personal advertising columns in the New York newspapers carry an inquiry as to the whereabouts of anyone named Leavenworth. A man named Leavenworth has left a fund to provide a year at Yale for anyone having the same name. Only one Leavenworth a year may attend, and if there are several applicants, a competitive examination is held.

One of the older wills provided as follows: "I have 71 pair of trousers. They are to be sold to the poor, and the proceeds given to the poor. The garments shall not be meddled with, and only one pair shall be sold to any one person." The sale was held. The purchasers, when they took the pants home, found a $1,000 bill in each pair.

A Mistake

Architects, whom I admire chiefly because they have the knack of figuring out in advance just where the hot water pipe will go in every one of 200 apartments in a building, do make mistakes sometimes. I went backstage at one of the newer and better theaters the other night to speak solemn words with a comedian, and found him in a funny little coop of a dressing room. "Not much for a star, is it?" he said. "When they built the theater they didn't figure on dressing rooms, and found they had to put them in later."

Avoids Women

When you hear the name, Pirie MacDonald, you unconsciously think of the phrase, "photographer of men." MacDonald has been a photographer of men for 30 years, and not once in that time has he made a woman's portrait. Sixty thousand men have posed for him in that time.

Men who make pictures of women make emasculated pictures of men, says MacDonald, and he will have nothing of it. At Christmas time he wanted a portrait of his daughter, and he paid another photographer $180 to do the job.

Women, MacDonald claims, wear uniforms, while the men dress distinctively. "Take the Ritz ballroom," he goes on. "Out of 100 women, 95 wear gowns cut to the minute. Their hair is done the same, and they powder and paint by decree."

And the strange part of it is that MacDonald, thirty years and more ago, won four successive annual prizes for the best photographs of women.

Then and Now

Hunter college, New York's college for girls, has advanced with the rest of the country since it was founded by Thomas Hunter in 1870. President Hunter ruled his wards with a stern hand, and one of his most strictly enforced rules was that only parents or guardians of the girls might meet them near the college. When, on a morning stroll down Park avenue, President Hunter met a girl in company with a gentleman, the girl invariably would say, "But, sir, he is my brother." President Hunter finally banished brothers. His wards couldn't eat candy, nor could they loiter on the sidewalk. And now let's look at them. Noontime comes, and they flock to drug stores for gooey nut sundaes; then they stand in knots at street corners and subway entrances, chatting with youths and defying the Hunter ghost.

Society Chatter

The New Yorker has found this item of society chat in the London Daily Express: "Among Mrs. Fielden's guests were Sir Jock and Lady Broughton, Major and Mrs. Jack Coats and Sir Anthony Weldon; and for Sir Anthony at least the sojourn among the quiet vales of Yorkshire must have provided welcome recuperation. For he had just undergone a singularly trying domestic crisis, due to the inexperience of a housemaid newly imported from Ireland.

"The maid stepped inadvertently on a trapdoor communicating with a flat below, and was precipitated, to the horror of everyone concerned, not only into the bathroom, but actually into the bath in which a marquis was engaged in performing his ablutions."

The Modern Way

LIGHTNING RODS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I had supposed, until I made a trip to southern Illinois a few weeks ago, that the lightning rod which once had so general a vogue had gone the way of corsets and consumption cures, and electric belts for relieving fits, and fakes generally which intrigued the credulity of the inexperienced and robbed them of their money a generation or two ago. I supposed that we all knew that buckeyes carried in the pocket neither prevent nor cure rheumatism, and that the lightning rod may be a menace to safety rather than a protection if not properly adjusted. But I am mistaken; the lightning rod, and Nancy tells me also the corset, is coming back again.

All through the farming district, as we drove down toward Metropolis, we could see the work of the lightning rod dispenser. Every house, every barn, every outbuilding, from woodshed to chicken roost, was bristling with lightning rods. Fourteen I counted on one farmstead.

I could guess how it all happened. Some silver-tongued orator, trained in salesmanship at college, had dropped in on the Browns and had sold them the proposition. Safety, protection, freedom from sudden death were all to be gained by the simple investment in lightning rods—the more the better. They fell, and, being the most prominent people in the neighborhood, were followed suit by the neighbors as meekly as sheep following each other over the pasture fence.

If it isn't lightning rods it is something else quite as foolish that we all adopt. Two years ago all the big boys in college had coonskin coats. I knew a boy who waited table and fired furnaces in order to get himself one and so be in style. Last year the coonskin coat was quite passe. All the real beau brummels had camel's hair. One just wasn't in it without a camel's hair coat. Next year it will be something else and the camel's hair coats will be thrown into the discard.

It was the same way with garters. Some one started the fashion of discarding garters and letting his socks hang in a discouraged way over his ankles and immediately every young fellow threw away his garters.

We don't think so much for ourselves; we follow the fashion; we do as our neighbors do. If Mrs. Brown has long skirts or bobs her hair or goes in for antique furniture, then all the neighbors follow in quick order. If Brown puts a lightning rod on the hen house, immediately all the chicken houses in the township are furnished with lightning rods.

The story is told that in the late war a German private soldier was apprehended upon French territory and brought in to the American commander of the post.

"See here," the American said, "You have no business here. What's going to happen to you is that you're going to be backed up against the fence and shot."

"Vell," the German said, ready to adopt lightning rods if that was the style, "Vateffer iss de rule."

Another case of lightning rods.

Trained Monkey to Steal

Mexico City.—Chapultepec zoo is serving not only as the residence of unoffending beasts, whose only mission is to entertain the crowds, but also as a prison for a monkey arrested by capital police as the confederate of a notorious burglar.

Benito Hernandez, renowned as a second story worker, last year convinced police authorities here that he had reformed. A suspicious crowd, the detectives who had many times caught him redhanded at his illicit work, continued for months to watch him carefully. Their most sagacious agents, however, were unable to observe the least outward sign in Hernandez' activities.

Now, police charge, it has been revealed that the reformed burglar's period of good behavior was devoted to training a monkey of unusual intelligence, which in recent weeks has been performing crimes as neatly as his master used to do. Authorities believe a long series of robberies in the Tacubaya district were solved when Mrs. Maria Barrientos discovered the monk in the act of robbing her home. The policeman she called experienced the greatest difficulty in following the agile culprit over the roof tops to the nearby home of Hernandez.

In the latter's rooms were found dozens of articles recently stolen in the neighborhood. Hernandez pleaded he was not responsible for his pet's acquisitive habits, and that he had been unable to return the articles because their owners were unknown to him. He is being held in jail pending appearance in court.

Man Might With Profit Take Lesson From Dogs

If man took lessons from dogs, the world would be a better place, according to Frank Dole, sportsman and dog fancier, writing in Country Home.

"This," he says, "is not hero worship on my part, but I do believe that the sacrifices dogs make for men and the faith the dog places in his master are examples of the finest qualities, qualities which man might show in a greater degree to the benefit of everybody. But just as among millions of men there are comparatively few who could properly be described as heroes, so among the millions of dogs not a great many distinguish themselves above their fellows for heroism.

"It is true that a dog's devotion is seldom alienated by neglect, but to bring out the finest qualities in him he must be treated as a companion. Trust and companionship are the things that have produced the greatest of canine heroes."

A FAMILY DOCTOR'S LAXATIVE IS BEST

Your health is too important! You cannot afford to experiment with your delicate bowels when coated tongue, bad breath, headache, gas, nausea, feverishness, lack of appetite, no energy, etc., warn of constipation. This applies not only to grown people, but more particularly to children. That's why a family doctor's laxative is always the safe choice.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is prepared today under strict laboratory supervision from fresh laxative herbs and other pure ingredients, and exactly according to Dr. Caldwell's original prescription.

Today, millions of families rely on Dr. Caldwell's judgment in the selection of their laxative. For Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in bottles ready for use, sold in all drug-stores, is now the largest selling laxative in the world!

Well-balanced people are careful to weigh their words.

Says The United States Public Health Service

WHEN children come down sick with typhoid or summer complaint, which kills more than 1/5 of the children who die under five, what is the cause? Often the disease has been brought into the home by flies.

Be comfortable and safe. Keep your home insect-free. Spray Flit, which is guaranteed (or money back) to be quick-death to flies, mosquitoes, moths, roaches, bedbugs and other household insects. Yet its clean-smelling vapor is harmless to humans.

Flit kills quicker if you use the special inexpensive Flit Sprayer. Insist on Flit and don't accept a substitute. Get yours this very day!

Lower Prices Featured In All Penney Stores

Material reductions in the base prices of a wide variety of articles have resulted in a general re-pricing of these items by 1450 J. C. Penney stores, with the new levels representing a substantial increase in the customer's buying power, according to a statement released today by Earl C. Sams, president of the J. C. Penney Company, through Charles Nelson, manager of the store here.

"Commodity prices, particularly in staple lines, have been declining for some time past," Mr. Sams states, and orders now being delivered to our stores are on a lower basis enabling us to pass on the consequent savings to our customers.

"There have been notable reductions so far in silk price goods, silk hosiery and other items which have been affected by the general decline in the price of raw silk Among these are flat crepes, georgettes, satin crepes and other silks which sho wvery substantial reductions. Some of our well known brands of silk hosiery are today priced lower than at any time since the war.

"In men's and boys' work clothes equivalent reductions have been made by the manufacturers and these reductions are today reflected in the price tags on these items in our stores.

"A trend toward lower prices has been indicated by leaders in other industries and has been given considerable attention in trade and business magazines during the past month.

"In making these new low retail prices we feel we are bridging the gap between the new lower wholesale prices and the prices to the consuming public and are therefore contributing directly to the reestablishment of greater confidence both by the manufacturer and by the buying public.

"We are making these new prices available immediately.

"As a result of generally lowered prices on raw materials, we have been able either to reduce the selling price on much staple merchandise or to give to our customers better articles at the same prices.

"This readjustment in prices throughout our stores is a direct result of savings passed on from the mills and manufacturers, and now made available to our customers throughout the country."

PASSAGE OF TARIFF AIDED BY SHORTRIDGE

The tariff act which has just been signed by the president contains many duties of importance to California agriculture and industry. In its enactment the California members of the House and Senate have gained many needed advantages for their state and constituents.

Senator Samuel M. Shortridge was a member of the Committee on Finance of the Senate which prepared the bill for the consideration of that body, and later was one of the conferees who composed the differences between the House and the Senate. In such capacities he played an especially important part in framing the tariff act. During the year and a half while the tariff bill pending the first Monday in December of that year he has remained there continuously and without opportunity to return to California up to the present time. Although Congress was in adjournment during part of that period, the work on the tariff bill and the hearings before the Senate Finance Committee kept Senator Shortridge in Washington during the entire period of adjournment through a hot Washington summer.

Many existing rates were maintained and a considerable number of duties were increased by the House when that body first had the tariff bill before it. All of the California Congressmen gave vigorous and effective support to the requests presented from California for tariff consideration. Many of the duties so increased were subject to attack in the Senate. Against such attacks made on the duties on California products, Senator Shortridge presented ull and complete defense in the Senate Finance Committee and both California Senators defended these duties on the floor of the senate.

Miss Eleanor Ray entertained at bridge at her home on Clinton street Wednesday evening. Miss Dorothy Lyons, a bride-elect, was the honoree. High scores were made by Mrs. George Ashley, Miss Grace Mead and the consolation was awarded Miss Dorothy Lyons. A shower of kitchen linen was then tendered Miss Lyons. Those present were Mrs. James Roland Hedge, Mrs. Mrs. George Ashley of Palo Alto, Mrs. Harry Arnold and the Misses Margaret Kalenborn, Dorothy Lyons, Grace Mead, Margaret Heiner and the hostess, Miss Eleanor Ray.

The wedding of Miss Gertrude Scheld and Mr. Donald A. Kirtland took place yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, at the First Congregational church in this city. The Rev. R. B. Cherington of Palo Alto, a friend of the groom's family read the impressive marriage rites.

Mrs. Philip Bray presided at the organ and played, "I Love You Truly" before the ceremony. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, the ushers, Mr. Albert Davies and Mr. Owen W. Stokes, leading. They were followed by the maid of honor and bridesmaid, walking together.

Miss Genevieve Scheld of San Francisco, as maid of honor, wore a long blue chiffon gown and carried a boquet of blue pansies and pink Cecil Breuner roses; Miss Helen Scheld of Honolulu, wore a similar gown of green chiffon and her boquet was of yellow pansies with Irish Elegance buds. They both wore lace bandeaux on their heads, fastened in back with velvet bows in colors matching their gowns and slippers. Both attendants were sisters of the bride.

Then came Miss Scheld, who was a very beautiful bride in a white satin wedding gown, made with a cape collar and long tight sleeves. The skirt was long and made with circular flounces. A long tulle veil was held in place with a band of tulle, fastened at the sides with orange blossoms. She carried a shower boquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

The ceremony was performed before the altar, banked with potted ferns and palms, and baskets of white flowers adding the only color used, with the exception of pink roses on the sides of the altar.

Mr. Kirtland was attended by his brother-in-law, Mr. A. W. Gentry of San Fernando.

Following an informal reception in the church, the bridal party and immediate families repaired to the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in San Mateo, where a dinner was held.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis T. Scheld of northern California. She is a very popular member of the younger set in this city.

Mr. Kirtland is the son of Mrs. George A. Hopkins of 64 Fulton street. He is a graduate of Sequoia High School and the San Jose State Teachers' College and at present is head of the manual training department of the Junior High School at Eureka, California, where the young couple will make their home.

WHAT EDITORS SAY OF TELEPHONE

Telephonically Speaking

Infrequent interruptions, through storm or mechanical trouble, in the telephone service serves as a reminder of the way in which this system of communication has been wrought into the very fibre and substance of modern life. It is one of those great conveniences, or blessings, which are taken for granted and little appreciated. It has become second nature to believe that it is only necessary to take down the receiver to be brought into instant touch with any one to whom it is desired to speak on business or personal affairs.

In one sense it is a striking tribute to the excellence of telephone service that people feel so lost and bewildered when it is broken off suddenly. Such accidents are rare. And as the years pass they become rarer.—Cheyenne (Wyo.) Tribune.

The first telephone exchange in Great Britain was opened at 36 Coleman Street, E. C., London, in August, 1879. Shortly thereafter, telephone exchanges were also opened in Glasgow, Manchester, Liverpool, Sheffield, Edinburgh, Birmingham and Bristol.

MENLO PARK LODGE HOST TO VISITORS

The officers and members of Paul Revere Lodge, No. 462 F. & A. M., paid a fraternal visit to the officers and members of Menlo Park Lodge No. 651, F. & A. M. Saturday afternoon. A baseball game between members of the two lodges enlivened the afternoon; the visiting team winning by a score of 17 to 2. The team later went down the highway to Sears' Cafe, where a dinner was enjoyed by most of the visitors and some of the hosts.

In the evening the visitors conferred the Third degree of Masonry on a member of Paul Revere lodge, after which the members adjourned to the banquet room, where light refreshments were enjoyed, followed by a program of musical selections by a trio of the visitors with banjos and piano; speeches and stories.

The visiting team was headed by Alonzo J. Owen, worshipful master of Paul Revere Lodge, and was welcomed by Victor Hugo, worshipful master of the Menlo Park lodge. The occasion was the fourth visit of Paul Revere lodge to Menlo Park.
